All students must first set up their SJSUOne account before accessing Canvas. To do so, go to <http://its.sjsu.edu/services/sjsuone/> . The Username for Canvas then is your 9 digit SID or Employee ID and your PW is the one you chose when you established your SJSUOne account. You will see the courses you taking (assuming the instructor is using Canvas).

Further Assistance with Canvas

Students should go first to <http://guides.instructure.com/m/4212> with problems and then to the University Help Desk for Canvas problems, including logging in (<http://www.sjsu.edu/helpdesk/>).

Course Description

Through learning, humans and animals share a capacity to adapt to ever changing demands in the environment. Attempts to understand these processes form a cornerstone of experimental psychology. Theories from this basic research have contributed to applications and further theory development in many other areas of psychology (e.g. clinical, social and education). PSYC 155 is an introduction to the study of learning and behavior and focuses on the Behavioral Perspective as a way of improving our understanding of human behavior and how it is shaped.

The course will focus on two types of learning: Classical and Operant conditioning. Students can have a life-changing experience in this course, because it provides the basis for new ways of approaching common life challenges such as disciplining children, maintaining positive marriages and other relationships, and procrastination (to name just a few). The material is intellectually challenging at times, but well worth the effort required to learn to think like a Behaviorist!

Learning Outcomes

The primary goal of this course will be to help you develop an understanding of the major themes, issues, and methods recognized within the psychology of learning. The aim of this course is to provide an understanding of the basic principles of the learning process. You will discover the learning processes that allow us to know how and when to act in order to obtain desired pleasurable aspects of our environment and to avoid unwanted unpleasant ones.

Course Requirements and Assignments

SJSU classes are designed such that in order to be successful, it is expected that students will spend a minimum of forty-five hours for each unit of credit (normally three hours per unit per week), including preparing for class, participating in course activities, completing assignments, and so on. More details about student workload can be found in University Policy S12-3 at <http://www.sjsu.edu/senate/docs/S12-3.pdf>.

Exams

Exams will be multiple-choice. The tests will have questions from the text, lectures and videos. Each exam will be given on canvas during the lecture period, and you will have 60 minutes to complete the exam.

** Make-up exams will be given ONLY when there is a documented excuse that must be approved by the professor (medical notes, etc.). A make-up exam will not be the same multiple-choice exam that is given in class. The make-up exam will consist of 5 to 8 essay questions on topics covered in the textbook and lecture, and it will be worth the same point value as the original exam. ****

LMS Completion: Complete the assigned LMS (Learning Management System) assignments through Canvas. From there click the Cengage tab under the class, this will link you to the appropriate website to complete the LMS. There is no time-limit. The assignments are graded based on completion and mastery of the chapter. You must complete an assignment for each of the assigned chapters on the syllabus. There are NO MAKE-UPS on LMS assignments (NO EXCEPTIONS). You must do them during the time period they are assigned. You will complete 10 assignments throughout the semester. Each assignment is worth 10 points for a total of 100 points for the semester.

WRITING PROJECTS:

Assignments are listed on Canvas.

This semester there will be one project:

- Self-Change Project

ALL of these assignments will be turned in with the self-change paper. I WILL NOT ACCEPT LATE WORK.

Please do not email an assignment, it will NOT be accepted, nor will hardcopies in class.

Self- Change Project

Nobody is perfect. Some of us drive too fast, or too carelessly. Some of us want to recycle our newspapers, but never get around to it. We want to eat less and exercise more, but it just does not happen for us. We know some of our habits are bad for us (smoking, drinking) but we cannot cut back.

Principles of learning offer a solution. B. F. Skinner's behaviorism, although developed through carefully controlled scientific laboratory research, can be used to help people increase behaviors that they desire and decrease behaviors they wish to avoid. Use self-change principles to change some aspect of your behavior. Focus on some specific type of behavior that you would like to perform more (exercise, studying, being polite) or a behavior you would like to do less (partying, eating, drinking, being rude). Some other examples of things students have tried to change are listed at the bottom of this handout. Record the behavior on the provided behavioral checklist for one week, without attempting any change. Please note:

Please know that self-monitoring your behavior is difficult, but a task that can (and will) be completed.

Step 1: Behavior Decision.

- Decide on the behavior you will increase or decrease
- Write a paragraph description of the behavior, being as behaviorally specific as possible; express the goal of your project in observable, quantifiable terms.
- These goals must be very specific, and include both long and short range (daily) goals--but most important, they must be measurable;
- You can select those behaviors which you wish to do away with, non-desired goals as well as desired behaviors--but it would be best if you described behaviors that you want to increase (focus on creating behaviors that are incompatible with the behaviors you want to remove)

Step 2: Baseline 1.

- Establish the baseline, the operant level: measure the frequency of both the good and the bad behavior before you try to create any changes:

*Measurement is critical in self-change projects, so begin by recording your behavior on the checklist. Please note what is happening before during and after the selected behavior.

*Include the information about baseline in your report

- The length of your baseline recording will be over a three-week period.

Step 3: Design Behavioral Change

- Select SR (Reinforcing Stimulus) and design the contingencies.
- Make a list of the reinforcers that you have decided are potent and controllable for and by you.
- List these reinforcers in your report and note which one you plan to use to control the behavior.
- You can also identify punishers: aversive stimuli that you would rather avoid. You will be using these to reduce behavior.

Types of reinforcers to consider:

- Physical rewards: such as candy, food, drinks, etc.: things you want;

- Social rewards: arrange for someone else to give you praise, attention, and so on if you perform the target behavior;
- Activities: things you like to do (such as watching TV, socializing, etc.) that you cannot do if you don't perform the behavior;
- Note: It is often advisable to use a variety of reinforcers, so you will not "burn out" on one.

Name the Contingencies:

- State the exact conditions under which these consequences are applied (e.g., If I study for 1 hour I will get 5 M&M candies).
- If you plan to use punishment, then state those criteria as well (e.g., I did not meet my goal of studying for 3 hours and so the following day I did not permit myself to listen to any music).

Step 4: Intervention Stage.

- Institute the Program of Behavior Modification. Begin controlling the behavior through judicious use of reinforcers and punishment. This period should last one week (use another self-monitoring check list for recording behavior).
- Keep good records: record the behavior and the reinforcers/punishments constantly.
- Control the "stimulus environment". It is essential that you can administer the reinforcers immediately after the behavior, and that you can reduce interference from reinforcers that you do not control. That means you should make changes in your routine to avoid temptations (e.g., tell other people about the project and ask them not to interfere).
- If appropriate, post cues in your environment that will trigger your response: if you are supposed to be exercising more, then put up a sign in bedroom that says "Today you must exercise for 1 hour." (Describe your use of such a sign in your report).
- The length of your intervention recording will be over a three-week period.

Step 5: Follow up.

Because of time constraints, this step is optional, but would be used in any professional behavior modification project. Once the behavior has been created, you would return to baseline by stopping the rewards or punishments. This step is not necessary for this report. However, should you decide to complete this step, record your behavior on the checklist for one week.

Step 6: Write up the report

- Please type the report. There are no length restrictions. Use the length that you feel is appropriate to exactly specify what you did. The paper will have five sections:
  1. Introduction. (1-2 pages)
  2. Literature review. (2 pages)
  3. Methodology. (1 page)
  4. Results. (1 page)
  5. Discussion. (4-6 pages)
  6. Conclusion (1 page)
- The report will include charts and graphs of the behavior rates, but it should be a well-written narrative (with sentences and paragraphs).
- Use appropriate terms from the lectures and text.

Helpful Information:

Some sample behaviors that you can modify are listed at the end of this page. Also, if you would like more information on the psychology of self-control--especially the science side of self-control based on verified principles of behaviorism instead of that "pop" psychology stuff that is not really helpful at all--begin with Dr. Clay Tucker-Ladd page. He is the author of Psychological Self-help, which is available on the web at the following site: <http://mentalhelp.net/psyhelp/>

Dr. Tucker reviews, in detailed, dozens of self-change methods, including:

Change the environment to change your behavior
Learn new behavior (using models, self-instructions)
Controlling/Conditioned response
Relapse prevention
Motivation training--increasing our drive level
Avoid self-deception--recognize your motives and defenses
Record behavior--self-monitor and check your progress
Record antecedents & consequences; behavioral analysis
Disrupt the unwanted habit; thought stopping
Substitute new behavior to break a bad habit
Satiating behavior or flooding; paradoxical intention
Change defeatist attitude; quieting the internal critic; flow
Develop positive expectations; building self-efficacy
Increase intrinsic satisfactions
Reward the desired behavior--a powerful method
Negative reinforcement--an important concept for insight
Self-punishment

Structure for Assignments

1. ALL OF YOUR WORK NEEDS TO BE UPLOADED ON CANVAS IN PDF. OR DOC. NO WORK WILL BE ACCEPTED IN ANY OTHER MEDIUM.
2. Your papers need to be organized - you should be developing a central idea in each section and the reader should be able to follow the logic of your argument. Each paragraph should have a coherent theme and paragraphs should follow each other in an organized manner. Read over your papers to be sure that there is a logical order to them.
3. Watch for grammatical errors, particularly sentence fragments and run-on sentences. You will be marked down for these errors.
4. Your papers will be typewritten, double-spaced, one-inch margins, using Times New Roman font. (APA Format) <https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/560/18/>
5. References included in your paper are to be done according to APA style as described in the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association, 6th Edition, which is available in the library, the campus bookstore, and on-line. You should have at least 2 references for every paper and they will be listed on a separate page on the back of your assignment.

Grading Policy

Grades are updated on Canvas. Grades will be based on LMS quizzes (10 quizzes worth 10 points each), exams (2 exams worth 100 points each), completion of the rough draft and peer review of project (20 points), and class project (80 points):

2. 10 LMS quizzes will be worth 5 points each (50).
3. Self-Change project will be worth 100 points including peer reviews (100): See Rubrics for Assignment.

Classroom Protocol

Syllabus Policy:

The course syllabus presented in this document will be followed as closely as possible. However, the course syllabus, schedule, policies, and procedures are subject to change at the discretion of the instructor or in the event of extenuating circumstances. This includes the tentative dates listed. The instructor will announce possible changes of the syllabus in advance. Since such announcements are typically made during class, it is the student's responsibility to clarify any of these changes that may have been made when the student is absent.

Although you will be responsible for all of the material in the assigned readings, some of the information may not be covered in class. Therefore, if there is material that is unclear to you it is highly recommended that you discuss this material with me at an appropriate time (e.g., during office hours). It is your responsibility to read the syllabus and ask questions about it so that you have a clear understanding of the expectations. If you are unclear about any of the requirements/expectations, then please set up a time to speak with me. I will be grading as though you have a clear understanding of the course requirements and material.

Attendance:

I will not be taking attendance. You are adults and need to make your own decisions. Please realize that your decisions have consequences (If this makes no sense to you then this is the course for you, as you will understand through operant conditioning that behaviors have consequences!). Students are responsible for everything that is said and done in class. I strive to make my classes not only educational but also enjoyable. It is important to note that it is the student's responsibility to withdraw from a course they do not wish to take. If you simply stop coming to the class and do not withdraw from the course, then you will still receive a grade that will be based on the completed work. Additionally, I encourage students to arrive on time for the class. However, I understand that extenuating circumstances do arise that can prevent your diligent efforts toward punctuality. I do have a small portion of your grade based on participation, tardiness can affect your grade. Many important pieces of information are discussed in class, and students are responsible for knowing and complying with this information including changes in assignments. Please make appropriate adjustments to your schedule to allow for arrival to the class on time.

Classroom courtesy and disruptions:

Class disruptions are not tolerated. Students will be removed from class if they are being disruptive to fellow students or the professor. Disruptions include but are not limited to not paying attention (e.g., reading the newspaper, sleeping), tuning off video, etc. In accordance with university policies on student conduct, it is expected that you will treat other students and the instructor with courtesy and respect. Being distracting on Zoom ARE ACTIVITIES THAT ARE NOT RESPECTFUL!

University Policies

General Expectations, Rights and Responsibilities of the Student

Accommodation to Students' Religious Holidays

San José State University shall provide accommodation on any graded class work or activities for students wishing to observe religious holidays when such observances require students to be absent from class. It is the responsibility of the student to inform the instructor, in writing, about such holidays before the add deadline at the start of each semester. If such holidays occur before the add deadline, the student must notify the instructor, in writing, at least three days before the date that he/she will be absent. It is the responsibility of the instructor to make every reasonable effort to honor the student request without penalty, and of the student to make up the work missed.
